SPH Public Health Week Celebration

White Creek Community Center – Multi-Purpose Room 116

In honor of the American Public Health Association- Public Health Week, The School of Public Health is hosting a research symposium on April 6th, 2023. The poster session is an opportunity for the school to showcase the accomplishments of faculty, graduate, and undergraduate students. Graduate and undergraduate students are asked to participate in a poster competition.

- Awards will be given for the top three student poster presentations in each category.
- The top two student research posters in each category will be invited to compete for slots in the Annual Delta Omega Student Poster Session during APHA's Annual Conference to be held in Atlanta, Nov 12th – 15th, 2023.

Appropriate topics for student posters include a range of on-going SPH activities including:

-Research

-Outreach

-Practice

Students should consult with their faculty advisors regarding the content of abstracts and posters.

Submission Requirements: Students interested in participating are asked to submit an abstract by Tuesday February 28, 2023, to the following link: <https://forms.gle/aJUYkUWLt4STe1JE7>. Please include the title of the poster, corresponding authors, and department. Notice of poster acceptance will be sent out on March 6th by 5 PM. Two poster workshops, one for graduate students and one for undergraduate students, will be held in February to offer guidance in poster design and presentation.

NOTE: We encourage participation and collaborations with students from other colleges. The NPHW Symposium is a great opportunity to showcase your research and receive input from fellow students and faculty. However, monetary awards will only be available for School of Public Health students.
